Jerry Clark Named Quality Director at Commercial Services
Manufacturing quality veteran brings deep experience

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. – Goodwill of Central & Southern Indiana is pleased to announce that Jerry Clark has been appointed as the new quality director at Goodwill Commercial Services. In this role, Clark will be responsible for contract manufacturing customer support pertaining to quality production, kitting and packaging products under Goodwill's Quality Management Systems for ISO 13485:2016 and ISO 9001:2015. He brings 38 years of manufacturing quality experience to the position.

"We are lucky to have the chance to bring on an experienced leader with the depth of Jerry's resumé. Our team is excited by his arrival," said Victor Mai, vice president of manufacturing operations at Goodwill of Central & Southern Indiana.

Clark's extensive career over the past four decades includes work with McDonnell Douglas/Boeing, Safran/GE, Zimmer Biomet and Medivative Technologies.

"Goodwill needed a pro in this position who was immediately ready to get the job done, and Jerry's deep experience made him an ideal candidate," Mai added.

Clark holds a Bachelor of Science in industrial supervision and management technology from Purdue University. He has five children and two grandchildren and lives with his wife, April, on the northside of Indianapolis.
